Surety Finance Breaks $1 Million in Judgment Collection Accounts for 2003

Denver, CO---January 29, 2004---Surety Finance, Inc. announced that the company processed over one million dollars in judgment collection accounts in 2003. Surety Finance provides free service with no upfront fees to help individuals and businesses collect money awarded to them in a lawsuit.

While a judge or jury can award people with money through small claims or civil court, it is up to the individuals to physically collect those monies. Statistics show that 80% of all judgments nationwide go uncollected. Unlike collection agencies and law firms, Surety Finance requires no upfront cash. Clients only pay if and when Surety Finance collects the money. This new and unique service offers the help that the courts do not provide. Instead of paying money up front to a collection company and risk losing even more money, clients can enlist the aid of Surety Financial because Surety's investigative services are free. The company only makes money if it retrieves the money owed to clients through judgments.

Surety Finance spokesperson Ted Collier said, "We are very pleased to have hit the one million mark this year. We have a very dedicated team and great clients who know that we are providing a valuable service in collecting money that is rightfully theirs."

While Surety Finance encourages clients to seek all legal means to collect the judgments on their own, the company is frequently asked to step in to collect the money and close the cases when necessary. Surety Finance specializes in judgments that are anywhere from one to five years old in amounts ranging from as little as $500 to as much as $500,000.

With access to worldwide databases that are linked to hundreds of other judgment recovery professionals throughout the United States and abroad, Surety Finance's exploratory fingers reach far and wide. Surety Finance's high technology and investigative powers leave little room for individuals or businesses to hide. Their experienced investigative teams employ innovative and advanced methods of seeking and finding individuals and their assets. To seize assets, Surety Finance has the capability and the means that ordinary collection agencies do not have. In fact, many attorneys use judgment recovery professionals such as Surety Finance to aid in their own efforts to collect funds for clients.
